Our Contract, Our Rights

Article II.D Collaboration ...what's that?

How do decisions get made at your school? Who defines the issues? Who decides who gets to do that defining? This is about nothing less than you as a professional, sharing in the process of determining how your school works and how you go about teaching your students. It's the difference between joining in setting a course and being told what to do.

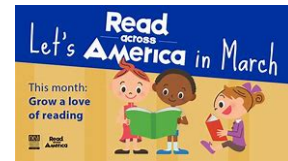

If you are affected by and responsible for the outcomes of decisions, then in almost every case you have the right to be part of the process from the very start. You share the authority along with the responsibility. Collaboration identifies teachers as leaders.

Are teachers part of making decisions at your school? Can you participate if you choose? This is fundamental to a strong educational culture aimed at student success.
